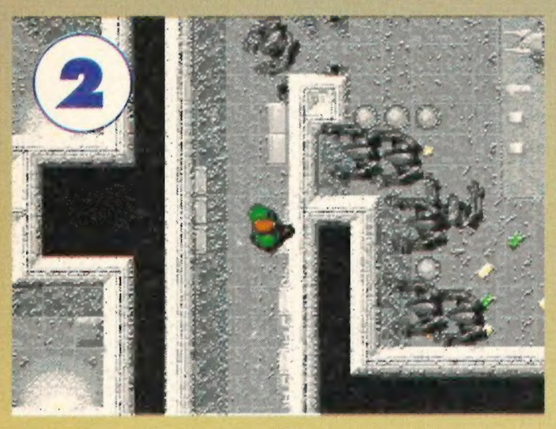
PENGUIN GALLUP CHARTS TOP 100

STREET FIGHTER II

It was kind of inevitable, but the conversion of the most popular arcade game of all time and the biggest game on the Super Nintendo has shot straight into the charts at number one. It's the best beat-'em-up on the Amiga, but it's about to face a real challenge with the imminent release of Team 17's Body Blows. And speaking of Team 17...

ALIEN BREED SPECIAL EDITION '92



To prove it was no fluke at number one last month, Alien Breed is still hovering menacingly at number two. Martyn Brown said "The most important aspect has been the feedback from players of the game – it's been absolutely brilliant. It also shows that there's no need to shower a product with hype and incredible ad-spend in order for it to succeed. As for the number one spot...well, we'll see about giving that some competition in the near future."

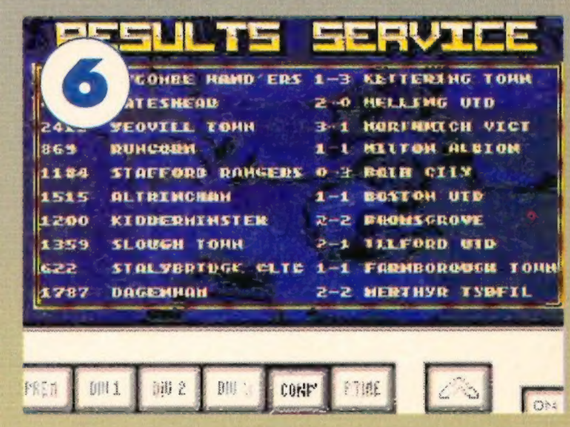
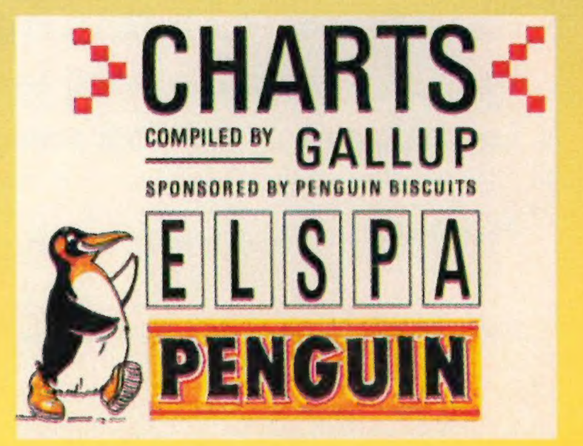
We figure you must have some idea how the charts work by now, so briefly: they're © ELSPA, they mix budgies and full pricers together, games are rated in stars, and now they're sponsored by Penguin!

WING COMMANDER

Long considered the best game on the PC, Wing Commander's conversion to the humble Amiga is new in at number four. James Morris at Mindscape said "The fact that Wing Commander's sold so well proves that what many said couldn't be done is achievable. We're extremely pleased that the game has proven as popular with Amiga owners as it was originally on the PC."

PREMIER MANAGER





Perhaps a bit of a surprise to see a football management game at number six, but it's not for David Martin at Gremlin. "It took a little while to hit the consumer market in general, and now it has the game has taken off in a big way. Evidence once again that quality is the key to success."
